YOUNG GIRLS DECEIVED.

MEN WHO ADVERTISE UNDER FALSE NAMES FOR FEMALE CLERKS.

A Practice Which Should be Broken up—It Prevails to an Alarming Extent—A Recent Case—Methods Used by the Unprincipled Employers—Traps for the Innocent.

A certain class of advertisements which are constantly appearing in the papers now-a-days are well calculated to, and unquestionably do, mislead many an innocent, trusting girl, who, with poverty staring her in the face, perhaps sickness and distress in her family, grasps eagerly at the bait held so temptingly before her, and tries to secure the position which, if obtained, would at least insure to her loved ones, some of the comforts that they stand so sorely in need of.

And what is the advertisement to which this young lady replies? "A gentleman, whose name is intelligent, refined, young lady to fill a clerical position in his office," and applicants are requested to apply in person at a certain hour.

The crafty advertiser has omitted to state that the only qualification essential to employment is that the applicant be young and good looking; hence when one young lady appears she meets a string of women who were rejected because of their inability to meet this requirement.

Replying on her preparations for clerical work, she presses on and enters the presence of the advertiser. He is evidently struck by her appearance, no doubt discovering by intuition that she would make a capable and efficient clerk.

He asks her to be seated, and after an unimportant question or two, he inquires if she will accompany him to the theatre that evening and to supper afterwards. The very suggestiveness of this proposition shows her what the designing scoundrel means by his advertisement, and she determines to terminate the lesson, if possible, so apparently falling in with his views, she agrees to meet him at 7:30 on a certain corner, and leaves his office (?), having been engaged for the position, salary not stated.

At the appointed hour this enterprising agent was met, not by his clerk, but by a good-sized, well-developed male representative, who proceeded to enter upon his duties in a manner rather surprising to, and altogether uncomfortable for, the gentlemanly employer. The aforesaid agent was met, not by his clerk, but by a good-sized, well-developed male representative, who proceeded to enter upon his duties in a manner rather surprising to, and altogether uncomfortable for, the gentlemanly employer.

At the close of Friday's session Congress will probably adjourn for the holidays. There are now before the Ways and Means Committee three distinct propositions for recess. The resolution introduced last week was for adjournment from Friday next to January 7. Some of the members of the committee are talking of an adjournment from Friday next to January 4. The third proposition, and the one which will probably be adopted, is for adjournment from Saturday next to January 7.

The Army and Navy Germans.
Washington, Correspondence Baltimore American.

A departure, it is rumored, will be made this year from the old-established programme of the winter's dancing. Heretofore the gentlemen of the united service of the army and navy have been in the habit of giving three cotillions during the winter. This year, however, it is expected that the three dances, there will be one great event, massive and grand in its splendor of gold braid and dancing avails. A huge hall will be procured, with a full regimental band, and a table of twelve, with a buffet supplied with abundance. Wine will flow, and there will be such a crush and jam as will cause even the Chinese minister's jail to take into consideration. Plans and decorations will be draped about in grand magnificence, and all attending will be expected to talk blank verse or carry on their conversation in rhyme. It is expected that the cost will be $30, the cost of the three events in former years.

Many objects are found to this scheme, who think the money too much for one ball and who think that it is being arranged by the older men of the service, who care more for the wine and supper than the more youthful element of dancers. The girls fear the cost will crowd out the limber-legged young men who dance, and make the evening one "stupid" affair. Many an appeal of decision will not be final, and that two semi-grand events may be decided upon.

Then this board met and elected A. A. Thomas president, M. M. Parker secretary and Joseph Paul treasurer. It was decided that it was too late to begin building the road before spring, when the work will be started, and the road built to Brightwood. Later the road will be built out as far as the District line.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

Legislation That Will Be Considered During the Next Few Days.

The present week will be the last before the holiday recess and Congress will be particularly busy. Attempts will be made to call up special legislation in which members of the two Houses are interested, to get them out of the way before the consideration of the more important appropriation bills is begun.

In the Senate the unfinished business is the Tariff bill, which, unless some new proposition is made, be considered day by day to the exclusion of all other business. The members of the Finance Committee of the Senate have been considering seriously the question of duration of the holiday recess. It was originally intended to make this recess but ten days in length, just long enough to catch Christmas and New Year's day, and, with the preceding Sunday, to give members an opportunity to reach their homes on Christmas day.

The proposition made to the House last week for an adjournment from Friday next until the 7th day of January meets with the disapproval of the leading members of both these important committees, and as the bills which are in their charge must be considered to the exclusion of all other business it would be natural to suppose that their wishes will have some weight with the majority in the Senate. The Republican Senators, who are blamed by their colleagues for forcing, or at least bringing about an adjournment of the Senate from Thursday, each week, to the next Monday, however, are expected to vote with the Democrats on the holiday question, and the House should expect a long recess, it is more than likely that the resolution will not be amended in the Senate. Adjournment will probably be had on Friday or Saturday next. Meantime, there is every reason to believe that the Tariff bill will be under discussion to the exclusion of all other business, except that of the morning hour.

It is possible that the District of Columbia Appropriation bill will be reported to the Senate before the end of the week. On Wednesday Mr. Crisp of Georgia hopes to call up the South Carolina contested election of Case vs. Elliot. This case will be hotly contested on the floor and may lead to an extended political debate. If it can be decided on Wednesday, and the friends of the River and Harbor bill do not obtain consideration of their measure on Tuesday, Thursday will find the House discussing inlets, harbors, rivers and engineers' reports.

At the close of Friday's session Congress will probably adjourn for the holidays. There are now before the Ways and Means Committee three distinct propositions for recess. The resolution introduced last week was for adjournment from Friday next to January 7. Some of the members of the committee are talking of an adjournment from Friday next to January 4. SOME QUEER PURCHASES.

SCENES AT THE ANNUAL DEAD LETTER SALE THIS MORNING.

A Collection of Articles That Could Stock a Variety Store—Good Prices the Rules—Some Bargains Secured—Ludicrous Incidents of the Occasion.

The annual sale of articles accumulated in the Dead Letter Department at the Postoffice during the past year began this morning at Dowling's auction rooms. The collection included 4,182 miscellaneous packages, 1,394 books and 158 packages of jewelry.

A catalogue of the articles was furnished, and included every imaginable variety of portable merchandise and clothing, silk handkerchiefs being in the majority, and ties, aprons and underclothing closely following. Ladies' and children's clothing appeared more frequently than in former years, and in men's apparel old nightgowns, cuffs and neckties were plentiful.

The articles were varied, however, and from a lieutenant's shoulder straps to a lady's bustle; from an old tooth brush to a pair of silk hose; from a false mustache to a actor's wig; from a clinical thermometer to a pair of suspenders; from a pointed china plaque to a box of metal castings; from a lady's garter to a wooden marlin spike, and included tobacco, carpenter's tools, stationery, music and articles which would appear in the inventory of a first-class and extensive variety store.

The book list embraced all classes of literature, old and modern fiction, religious tracts, scientific works, Government reports, sermons and trashy French novels.

The people who came to buy, attracted by the fascination of risking the obtaining of something valuable for a small sum, included all classes of persons. Seals, saques of fashionable West End ladies, and a number of the dingy cloak of the Goat Alley denizens, and the stylishly dressed gentleman of leisure stood side by side with the laborer, the odor of his Havana cigar blending with the smoke of the latter's "diudeen."

The bidding was lively and prices were in many cases ridiculously out of proportion to the value of the articles, the discretion which would characterize the purchaser at a store counter seeming to vanish in the excitement of buying "light unseen," as boys say when they swap jack-knives.

Some amusing incidents occurred when purchasers opened their bundles before the crowd.

A well-dressed young man with the air of a swell, who bought a package marked "Ladies' Fancy articles," and probably expected to get some ties or sachets, was much confused when he found a pair of long actresses' hose, a knit undershirt, a pair of garters and some false bangs. An old lady gave away some choice Irish explosives in a rich brogue when she rolled out a full suit of men's red flannel underwear.

An old colored man secured a package containing a small gold ring, a faded spray of mignonettes and a photograph of a handsome young man, together with a strip of Irish linen paper, smothering of violets, upon which was written in a delicate hand "Farewell." He pocketed the ring and with an oath of disappointment threw the rest away.

Murderer Haves' Own Child.

The body of Irene Hawes, the youngest child of Richard Hawes, the Alabama murderer, was found Saturday at the bottom of the lake at Lakeview Park near the city. The body of the child was found in a small boat, which was weighted down by pieces of railroad iron fastened about the neck. There were no marks of violence. The find caused no excitement as the people had expected to find the body of the child near the mother's body was discovered. When told that the body of the other missing child had been found, Hawes had nothing to say, except to ask, in an indifferent sort of way, where it was. He then refused to answer any questions. The girl's body had been increased as a matter of extra precaution, but no attempt to lynch Hawes is anticipated.

A Fire in Bed.

A lady visiting Nyack, N. Y. from the city of churches took a hot bed to bed with her on Sunday night. About midnight she was awakened by a smell, and found the lower part of her bed on fire and her toes just touched by the flames. A loud Brooklyn scream aroused the household. The impending danger was averted, and the lady and the lady's toes were awakened with sweat.

The Japanese Minister's Wife.

Mrs. Munetomo Munata, wife of the Japanese Minister at Washington, entertains her intimate friends with music on the "koto," the Japanese piano. It is six feet long by three feet wide, and is made of wood. The strings are drawn lengthwise on the rounded top. Mrs. Munata is a clever performer on the "koto," and she is especially accepted when she renders the music of the "Mikado."

An Ingenious Suicide.

A man in New Brunswick displayed a strange taste in suicide. He dug his grave, lowered his coffin, got in and took a dose of poison, and then pulled the string to a land-slide, which descended upon him.

Litchman For Labor Commissioner.

Charles S. Litchman, the ex-secretary of the Knights of Labor, is talked of as Commissioner of Labor under General Harrison, though his selection will meet with strong opposition from other prominent knights.
